

Image not found or type unknown

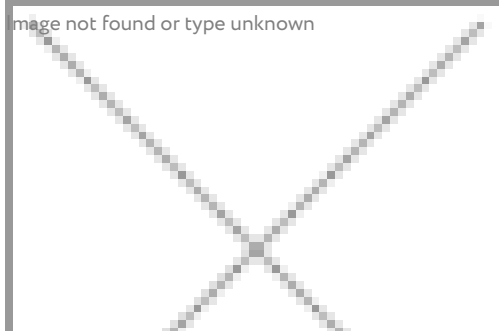

Stone house

Category	Competitions	Authors
Year	2012	Alexander Poroshkin Ekaterina Zrazhevskaya Elena Grabtsenko

There are no right angles and strict geometry in nature, the environment is organic and functional.

The bureau architects decided to create a house that would be associated with natural elements, such as stone, rock, seashell, bird's nest. They wanted to achieve an effect when the house blends in the local landscape and becomes its noticeable focal point.

Despite the atypical form, the functional integrity of the house is clearly defined, corresponds to the usual housing parameters and fits into resident's lifestyle.

Image not found or type unknownImage not found or type unknown